WRIGHT ROBINSON COLLEGE is recognised for its commitment

to helping pupils stay safe online

WRIGHT ROBINSON COLLEGE

is now a National Online Safety Certified School

WRIGHT ROBINSON COLLEGE has successfully completed a comprehensive online safety training programme demonstrating its commitment to keeping children and young people safe online.

The secondary academy – has received a National Online Safety Certified School Accreditation for its whole school community approach to protecting children in the online world.

National Online Safety is a multi-award winning digital training provider with extensive resources in online safety, developed in line with the Department of Education’s statutory requirements.

Its CPD accredited courses and educational resources support UK schools in educating the whole school community in online safety– including all school staff, senior leaders, teachers and parents – on how to make the internet a safer place for children.

James Southworth, co-founder at National Online Safety, said: “Congratulations to everyone at WRIGHT ROBINSON COLLEGE on becoming a National Online Safety Certified School. By completing our training programme, the school has shown its strong commitment to implementing an effective whole school approach to online safety.”

“It can be increasingly difficult for schools and parents to stay ahead of online threats and ensure both children and staff are safeguarded from potentially harmful and inappropriate online material. We arm schools with the knowledge they need to understand online dangers and how best to react to any problems.”
